

50TH ANNIVERSARY PLANS

INFORMATION RUSHED FOR VETERANS TRANSPORTATION

Gettysburg is Going to the Limit in Making Ready for the Crowd.

The 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission sent out last week under date of April 24, the following transportation notice, being in effect along the lines the COMPILE had urged upon General Wagner many months ago, that steps should be taken in advance of the passage of the act appropriating the money for transportation purposes, so that with some definite idea of numbers preparations could be made by railroads and for camp purposes. But the impossible Gen. Wagner blocked everything but a leap in the dark and the Commission as now constituted are making valiant efforts to overcome the difficulties of the situation and they must know now and how quick those who will be entitled to free transportation. There are more than 50,000 veterans in the State of Pennsylvania drawing pensions to-day and add veterans of the State beyond its borders. U. S. Regulars, soldiers of other States now citizens of the State and Confederate veterans, and the total must be largely in excess of the number carried on the pension rolls. If the information reaches every corner of the State in time for applications to be made, according to all past experiences Pennsylvania will be able to fill the great U. S. camp. According to General Thos. J. Stewart when free transportation has been offered at the dedication of monuments about 55 per cent. of those entitled have availed themselves of the offer. Now at the great reunion here in July but 70 per cent. would give a total of 35,000. The following is the transportation notice sent out by the Commission and every veteran should get busy at once furnishing the desired information.

The Acts just passed by the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, regarding the great Gettysburg Reunion Celebration, at Gettysburg, Penna., July 14 next, were immediately approved by Governor Tupper, and the one appropriating $155,000 for the Pennsylvania Commission to provide free transportation to Gettysburg and return makes the following five (5) classes of soldiers, sailors and marines of the Civil War eligible to such transportation, provided the war record of each applicant is first proven to be correct by the Pennsylvania Commission:

Class A. All honorably discharged soldiers who enlisted from this Commonwealth and served in a Pennsylvania Regiment, or any unit of Pennsylvania Volunteers, at any period during the Civil War, including commands of the Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (Emergency Regiments) and independent companies, batteries and troops, who are now living in Pennsylvania as citizens of this Commonwealth.

Class B. Any of the above who are now living in other States, but Pennsylvania provides these free transportation to Gettysburg and return only from the railroad station on the border of Pennsylvania which is nearest to their present residence; also

Class C. To any soldier either Union or Confederate, borne upon the rolls of any other State as a Civil War Veteran, but now living within Pennsylvania as a citizen of this Commonwealth, such transportation may be issued; likewise

Class D. To United States Regulars, soldiers of the Civil War, now living within Pennsylvania as citizens of this Commonwealth; and in addition Class E. To United States sailors and marines, veterans of the Civil War, now living in Pennsylvania as citizens of the Commonwealth.

All applications therefor must be made, and before June 1st, and the earlier the better, to the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission, at the Capitol, Harrisburg, Pa., and upon application blanks now procurable from said Commission, wherein must be stated explicitly the war record, etc., of each applicant, who must, in applying for such application blank, state what class he comes under.

An idea can be had of what the town is doing in the way of preparation for the crowd to be here in July, by the action of the Ministerial Association at their monthly meeting last week. It was decided that all the churches should be thrown open to the people who are unable to get rooms in the hotels and homes of the citizens and a very moderate scale of prices for accommodations was agreed upon: 25 cents for a pillow; 25 cents for a pillow and a cushioned seat; 50 cents for a pillow, blanket and pew. The opening of the churches, Sunday-school rooms and all parts of church buildings will take care of several thousand people. To this before the celebration begins will likely be added the rooms in the public schools, the court house and every public building in the town, but with all that the capacity of the town will be but little beyond 15,000. The citizens of the town are making heroic efforts to meet the emergency. We have heard of a number of homes in which 30 visitors will be housed and thousands have already engaged accommodations. There are many homes in which only eight to ten can be accommodated.

The Ministerial Association further decided to have services in all the churches of town both on the Sunday preceding and Sunday following the celebration. Instead of in only one church on Sunday evenings in July,

There will be many visitors who will want to see our churches.

An effort is being made to get Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan to conduct a sunrise religious service on one of the historic hills surrounding Gettysburg during the week of the celebration and the matter was placed in the hands of a committee of the association.

College Students Camp.

Additional details of the camp for college students at Gettysburg following the celebration were made public last week, and it is considered possible that Gettysburg may have here for six weeks as many as 2,000 students.

A plan by which college undergraduates may receive military instructions in camp this summer at little expense to themselves is being laid before the students and officials of the principal universities of the country by Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, acting for Secretary Garrison. The general arrangements for putting into effect this novel and revolutionary idea which originated with General Wood are now practically completed and the war department is rapidly going ahead with the plan.

It is proposed to establish this summer two experimental camps, solely for the college men, one in the east and the other in the west. Student soldiers to the number of 2,000 will be taken to Gettysburg immediately after the joint encampment of Union and Confederate veterans on the battlefield early this summer. About 500 more will be encamped at the Presidio of Monterey, Cal. The period of instruction will be, roughly speaking, about eight weeks, from early in July to late August, the exact dates being subject to change.

The purpose of the experiment, which will be made an annual event if this summer's trial proves successful, is to increase the present inadequate number of citizens who have had sufficient training to qualify them for efficient service in time of war. It is proposed to build up, if possible, a great body of well-educated young men who shall have acquired some military instruction through these camps and then draw upon them in time of war as material for commissioned officers of volunteer troops.

Consequently the War Department does not intend to burden the college men with the dreary grind of daily drill which the enlisted recruit who joins the ranks has to undergo. All the military instruction and exercises of the college men will take place in the morning for about four hours each day. Afternoons and evenings the students will have to themselves. It is proposed to make the exercises of a highly interesting character, dispensing with all possible drill-ground work. All the maneuvers will take place in the field, where the young men will be instructed in such things as enter into the conduct of an actual battle rather than an exhibition drill.

The exercises in the field will be varied frequently with lectures on military subjects by the best officials available. The college men will be told all about the causes of war, why a nation's policies bring it into conflict with the forces of another nation, something of strategy and tactics and the principles which govern campaigning in the field.

The War Department will furnish cooks and bakers and the necessities for preparing food in camp. It will furnish arms for each man, complete and under loan, of course, will be turned in at the end of the encampment.

The students, owing to the absence of any appropriation for these camps, will be obliged to pay their transportation to the point of encampment and return and also their subsistence. It is expected that the subsistence will cost each man about $1.75 per week. Each student will also be asked to buy a uniform outfit, to cost $7.50 per man. This outfit, which will be the same as the regulars wear, will consist of two pair of khaki trousers, hat, leggings and shirt.

General Wood has prepared a letter explaining in some detail the plans for the encampments and is also writing personal letters to the heads of the many institutions to which the scheme has been presented.

Letters already have been sent to the following institutions: Yale, Georgetown, Georgia School of Technology, Bowdoin, Johns Hopkins, Amherst, Dartmouth, Williams, Princeton, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, University of Pennsylvania, University of Tennessee, Washington and Lee, University of Vermont.

Others will rapidly be added to the list.

A LARGE CONTRACT

When L. M. Buehler the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases that he would have a good many packages returned. But although he has sold hundreds of bottles, not one has been brought back.

To those suffering with dizziness, headache, poor digestion, constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific offers quick relief. It is an invaluable boon to all who feel uncomfortable after eating, and is today the popular dinner pill in all the large cities.

Bronzes on the Pa's. Monument.

Eight bronze statues were placed on the Pennsylvania memorial on Hancock avenue last week. The work of erection was done under the supervision of W. B. Van Amringe of the Van Amringe Granite Co. of Boston. General H. S. Huidekoper, Chairman of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Monument Commission was in town while the work was being done.

On either side of the main entrance to the memorial are statues of President Lincoln and Pennsylvania's War Governor Curtin. On the south side are Generals Hancock and Birney, on the east side Generals Gregg and Pleasanton, and on the north Generals Meade and Reynolds. The sculptors responsible for the statues from the artistic point of view are J. Otto Schweizer of Philadelphia, for Lincoln, Pleasanton and Gregg; Cyrus E. Dallin of Boston for Hancock; Clark Noble of New York for Curtin, and Lee O. Lowrie of New Haven, for Reynolds, Meade and Birney.

In an interview with Mr. Van Amringe he remarked it was so easy for those critically inclined to say that this statue is too short and another too long, or one too thin and another too thick. That it would be absurd to make them all look like the Apostles, standing in one position. He stated that a great deal of time and trouble had been devoted to the making of these bronzes. Gen. Gregg had posed for the artist and had also helped in the study made of Pleasanton. In the making of Curtin, Col. John Curtin, a niece of the War Governor, Gen. Beaver and others had been consulted. A sister of Gen. Reynolds had said he should be given a thinner appearance than his pictures usually convey. Members of Gen. Meade's family had been consulted. He told of how a number of pictures of the subjects had been secured and used in the work and in a number of cases garments of the individuals were available for study. In referring to the poses Mr. Van Amringe cited the fact that St. Gaudens had made a statue of Marcus Daly, with toes turned in, because no one ever saw Daly stand otherwise. Listening to Mr. Van Amringe the impression was conveyed that he was attempting to forestall criticism, that he was presenting excuses, that he was on the defensive and it all sounded like damning with faint praise because it was his business to do so and because of the fact that these statues are not in the class with the artistic creations of either a St. Gaudens or a Barnard. The work of a master always thrills with its greatness and humanness, but the sensation produced by these bronzes was a desire first to scream and laugh at what apparently looked more like caricatures than art. The laugh because of the artistic shock was finally displaced by a pity and a desire to know how much the artists were paid and how much the contractors and bronze people received, for judging by appearance art seems to have had the short end of it. One inspiring piece of statuary by a Barnard would have been more worth while than the whole collection.

Curtin seems to be the best. Hancock hampered down has lost his com-three pairs of legs on Meade, Reynolds and Birney look as though they were cut over the same pattern. Reynolds is unrecognizable as known from all previous representations. Lincoln looks like a type without artistic individuality. There are suggestions of lack of proportion about Gregg and Pleasanton. There are specimens of bronze work on the field that overshadow this work in every way. There is more of the human in the Minnesota man on the double quick, there is a thrill in the bronze cavalry charge on the 6th New York, and high art predominates in the equestrians, suggestions that these bronzes do not give.

It would seem not inappropriate if the Pennsylvania Legislature would appoint an investigating committee to inquire into the expenditures of the $190,000 that went into the erection of this memorial. The big pile is already in the grasp of disintegration. The dome leaks and water has streaked the granite in a number of places. The inside of the dome is discolored with damp blotches and along the stairway there is a big patch of cement ready to drop off. It needs attention to give it permanency structurally.

Dog Quarantine On.

A dog quarantine went into effect on April 23 over a third of the county and it will be in effect for one hundred days, or until August 1. The quarantine was ordered by the State Live Stock Sanitary Board at a meeting on last Wednesday. It covers the townships of Franklin, Menallen, Butler, Straban and Cumberland and the boroughs of Arendtsville, Bendersville, Biglerville and Gettysburg, fully a third of the county. Yellow posters have been put up throughout the districts announcing the quarantine.

There is good reason for the quarantine and every citizen should lend assistance to stamp out the contagion of rabies that has broken out in these districts at different points. There is no question that a mad dog started on a rampage near Maryland line and was killed near Hunterstown. There is no doubt of the fact that the dog of Edward Redding on Bonneauville road had rabies and likely was bitten by the first mentioned animal. This second dog went through town every morning when owner drove to milk station. The Myers dog it is also known had reached a point near Hunterstown and was seen running with a number of dogs in town. Several farmers have lost animals by being bitten. There is no telling at the present moment how wide-spread the rabies may be in this county and a strict dog quarantine would greatly aid in stamping out the contagion. Every dog must be muzzled and in a way that he can not bite. Dogs running at large without muzzle and license will be killed. Owners of dogs should keep a watch on their animals and as soon as any unusual symptom appears consult a veterinarian and have the dog put out of existence and remove all danger.

Another W. M. Wreck.

Tuesday afternoon of last week 12 cars of a freight train on the W. M. R. were derailed east of Swift Run bridge by the "brake rigging" of a car dropping down. The cars were loaded with coal which was scattered along the track for some distance. The Baltimore and Hagerstown crews cleared up the wreckage, working all night. Passengers on the evening trains for Baltimore and Highfield were transferred from one train to another at the scene of the accident.

Woman's League of College Meets.

The Woman's League of Pennsylvania College held their second annual reception and rally in the lecture room of College Church on last Thursday evening. The local League has a membership of about a hundred. Its special object is the support of the College Library. The rally was largely attended and an enthusiastic interest was manifested on the part of everybody. A program, consisting of music reading, an address on Higher Education and a short talk on the work of the College Y. M. C. A. was rendered which was entertaining, informing and inspiring. After the program there followed a social hour during which light refreshments were served. Interest in the College and a spirit of loyal support was the dominant note of the whole evening. Everyone seemed delighted and pronounced the affair a success.

D., widow of Henry Laughman, late of Co. F, Regiment 155th Penna. Infantry, that they have been granted original widow's pensions.

DR. JOHN WM. C. O'NEAL

TOWN'S GRAND OLD MAN PHYSICIAN, AND FRIEND

Long, Useful, Devoted Life Has Scattered Blessings Along the Way.

Dr. JOHN W. C. O'NEAL fell asleep in the same month in which he was born, three days after having passed his 92nd birthday. Of his almost century run, a full half-century had been devoted to Gettysburg, having moved here in the spring of 1863. He passed out painlessly and restfully, sleeping away like a new babe. After a several days' sleep from which he could not be aroused he opened his eyes and asked for a glass of milk. Between long spells of sleeping he would awaken to take some nourishment or ask some question until the human machinery ran down and stopped.

Dr. O'Neal intellectually was of a strong type. He continually sought knowledge, he absorbed the latest thought in his profession, he never knew enough but was eager and hungry for further light and vital modest and unassuming about what he did know, but with a strength of conviction that gave him the force to do and dare and accomplish where others would not follow. He had an unusual gift of common sense. He could hit the nail on the head without any fringes to it. He was through his Irish-American blood a good fighter but knew when to forget the struggle and was always fair and square in everything he did so that he made warm and devoted friends out of some who started in to oppose him. In the sick room he was simply a wonder. He had a rare gift sometimes spoken of in the medical world as a sixth sense, a knowledge or appreciation of human ills, an intuitive diagnosis. He did not grope in darkness as to what was the matter with a patient, he recognized the thing and with a confidence in his judgment went after the healing. He was never known to shirk a duty. Seeing and knowing what must be done to heal or save a life, he devoted himself to the work and if heroic treatment was needed he not only prescribed it but gave it to the patient himself. He gave himself to his professional work with a rare devotion and love, and what he gave he received back in a devotion and love from those he ministered unto. He was outside of his business an enterprising citizen ever ready to advance the welfare of his town in ways that appealed to his judgment. In business he was at the same time a most careful man and a most generous one, careful in giving every man what he believed was due him and asking the same treatment, but in his professional fees were the last thing that entered his mind for he did not practice for what was in it for himself, but because of the love of the work and for the humans that he served and ever most generously, frequently forgetting his own services in the desire to be a friend in adversity.

Dr. O'Neal was born in Fairfax county, Va., April 21, 1821. He attended Gettysburg College several years, acquiring a fondness for the place that drew him here to make it his home. His medical education was acquired under the private tutelage of Drs. John Swope of Tanerstown, and N. R. Smith of Baltimore, and a course in the Medical Department of the University of Maryland, from which he received the degree of M.D. He settled in Hanover in spring of 1844, moved to Baltimore in 1849 and finally established himself in Gettysburg in 1863, and in the period before coming here had practiced a brief time at Fort Loudon.

He was one of the founders of the Adams County Medical Society, its first treasurer and later its president. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Medical Society and American Medical Association. He was a delegate to the National Medical Association from this State in 1884. He was appointed a member of the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in 1883 and served in this position for almost twenty-five years, and represented this State in the Thirtieth National Conference of Charities and Correction at St. Paul, Minn., in 1896. Before coming to Gettysburg he had served as Commissioner of Public Schools in Baltimore City for three years and was Vaccine Physician of a ward in that city for that period. He found time in a very busy life to contribute to the literature of his profession, and in this field his ability was recognized by many eminent physicians of the country.

The funeral of Dr. O'Neal was held on Monday morning at his home, Dr. T. J. Barkley conducting the services. The body was taken to Hanover on 12.55 train and interment was made in the Hanover Cemetery.

Dr. O'Neal married Miss Ellen Wirt, a daughter of Henry Wirt of Hanover, in 1847. Mrs. O'Neal died many years ago and five children survive him. Dr. Walter H. O'Neal, Miss Katie O'Neal, Miss Annie O'Neal of Gettysburg, Mrs. Mary Crapster of Taneytown, and Mrs. J. T. Huddle of Washington, D. C.

ORRTANNA.

Bern Spence on entering his new house one morning recently, which was not yet occupied and not quite finished, discovered that he had had a fire during the night. The day previous the carpenters had been applying the filler to the inside woodwork and had used a goodly number of cloths in the work which were thrown in a bushel basket. The rags in some way caught fire during the night, burning the basket and a hole in the floor about the size of the basket, burned over a pile of shavings which were mingled with the droppings of mud in the plastering, and went out. The fire is a mystery as no one had been smoking nor was there a stove in the building.

C. B. Lerew has purchased a lot of ground from Mr. Musselman and has already started the erection of a brick dwelling thereon. Come on John, Bill, Sam and Dave and make your future home at Orrianna. There are many worse places but few better.

Some persons entered the cellar of John Shultz who lives on R. D. 1, one night recently and carried off some potatoes. Nothing else was missing—he was just potato hungry.

Some say the cherries are all frozen but we are not all inclined to say so. It is presumed that there will be at least a medium crop.

The farm work is much retarded on account of the long periods of wet weather. Very little oats is sown. Some have not even started to plow. Where ground is low it will be some time yet before such ground can be plowed.

THE three dearest months, in the automobile business, are December, January and February. During this period some automobile factories shut down altogether.

With the Overland it has been the reverse. They have been shipping over 140 cars a day for the last six months.

Right now, they are delivering over $1,000,000.00 worth of Overlands every single week.

Their great factories can make no more than this. The demand forced them to manufacture as many cars in the dull season as they planned and prepared to do in the height of the best season---which is from April on.

The urgent demands for the 1913 Overland have broken and established new production records every day.

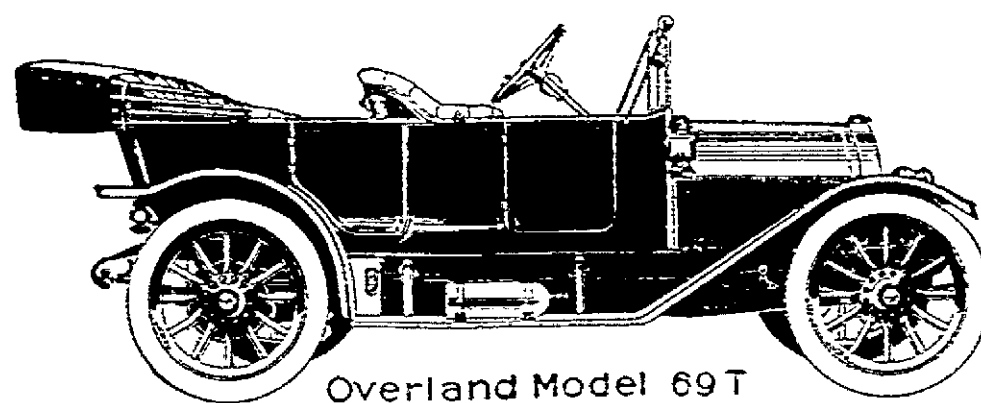

In 7 months they have shipped twenty-one thousand cars. This is just over 85 per cent. more than they delivered up to this time last year.

Every section, state and town in the country is ordering in excess of its contract---and it is utterly impossible for them to supply the cars.

This completely equipped, self-starting, 30 horsepower, five passenger touring car for $985 is the equal of any $1200 car built. It has the power, the speed, the seating capacity, the construction, the comforts and conveniences.

No car is made better. Being built in the largest, most completely equipped and most modernly appointed factory in the industry, you get in this car the same manufacturing methods used by the makers of the very highest priced cars. The methods of production are just as thorough, just as painstaking and just as exacting. The materials and cars are subject to the same rigid inspections and tests as the highest priced cars made.

Judge the value by the demand---and you'll always save money. They are now over 7000 cars behind their "immediate shipping orders" and it is still the latter part of the dull automobile season.

Figuring from the present pressure for Overlands, it is difficult to calculate what the demand will be when the spring season comes. It is safe to assume that they will be swamped. They advise quick action if you want an Overland. Delay will not only mean a longer wait for your new Overland, but possibly you will be unable to get one at any price.

Enter your order now, and you may get your Overland when you want it. We candidly advise you to see the Overland dealer without delay. And as a final suggestion---take one more look at the above figures.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alternative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

M. MAGUIRE, Esq.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Jersey, I had chills and fever," writes Mr. MICHAEL MAGUIRE, of National Military Home, Kans. "I went to Kansas City and in the spring of 1877 the chills and fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed to do me good. Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised. I took one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

Miss Melicent Melrose

AT THE 1913 CHAUTAUQUA.

The sweet-faced soprano singer who will assist the Florentine Band this summer, is a Boston girl, a pupil of Marie Lucas. Mme. Campiani's star protégé Miss Melrose has a mellow serenity of voice that makes her rendering of sacred solos infinitely pleasing. Standing on the platform in her quiet choir costume, she is an appealing beauty indeed. No wonder that with her rare talent and rich personality she shared honors for two seasons with Carl Webster, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra! Mr. Webster was then 'celloist for the Eastern Concert Company, with which Miss Melrose also toured.

Chautauquas at Wholesale Prices.

The line is not analogous to "Hats At Wholesale Prices!" or "House Furnishings At Wholesale Prices!" the catch phrase of the yellow catalogue houses. The corporation behind Chautauqua was organized, not for making money, but for pushing the pet idea of a grand old Methodist preacher, Bishop John H. Vincent worked out a system that would take the monopoly of "going to school" away from the bare-headed Varsity chap and the besweated college lass, that would share the enthusiasm of being alive and learning with older people with fresh ambitions and eager wits. The Vincent system, modified and quickened so as to meet the needs of practical-minded, busy people, is now the hobby of a hundred big-brained Americans zealous to do something worth while besides making a living. In Philadelphia a half dozen prominent businessmen are members of the no-profit organization that is making Chautauqua possible in towns in this section of the country. Hanover, Chambersburg and Gettysburg are only a few out of a hundred towns that will have one solid week of lectures, concerts, recitals, sheer fun, furnished by the talent that this one association sends out. In every town there will be a stirring talk by a noted statesman, Senator Gore, Governor Hadley, or Governor Glenn. There will be a talk by a noted churchman, Dr. Hillis, Dr. Cadman, or Dr. Waters. In every town a great Italian band, a company of Swiss mountain singers, a quartet, a juggler, magicians, readers, impersonators, soloists, a violinist will each have something purely inspiring or purely recreational to offer the crowd.

Entertainment at wholesale prices, the legitimate slogan of the managing committees, is the direct outcome first, of capital invested on the no-dividend basis; second, of talent services purchased by the season, not by the day; third, of the elimination of waste time and waste mileage. The towns of the Chautauqua chain are strung so close together that the entertainer, whose expenses are paid by the association, may easily get from place to place in the time that it takes to eat a good dinner, and at the price that it takes to pay for a poor one.

Birthday Party.

On Thursday evening, the 17th, in the silent, quiet hour of the night, when the clock struck eight; a number of neighbors and friends surprised Mr. Harry Lightner by calling upon him at his home near Mr. Hope school house and announced his birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lightner, Mr. and Mrs. John Sites, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kint, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kepner, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Eyer, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. After spending the evening in singing and playing the organ, and in pleasant conversation, also partaking of delicious cakes, all returned to their homes wishing Mr. Lightner many more happy birthdays.

Dr. Jesse B. Young Retires.

Rev. Dr. Jesse Bowman Young who served as pastor of the Methodist Church in Gettysburg for a period in the early seventies has retired from the ministry at his own request. Dr. Young raised the money for the building of the present Methodist Church and largely did so through lectures on the Battle of Gettysburg. The church was built in 1872 and Dr. Young has served pastorates in Harrisburg, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Jacksonville, Fla., and other places. He had a charge in Bluffton, Ind., when he decided to retire and the following scene occurred in the conference when he asked to be retired:

"Bishop W. F. McDowell in proffering the request that Dr. Young might be granted the privilege of being relieved from active pastoral supervision, spoke of the long time affection that had bound him to Dr. Young, and his great admiration for the different phases of Dr. Young's labors, as a preacher, a writer and an author and a man, and spoke with tenderness of longtime friendship that had grown up between them, meanwhile summoning Dr. Young to the platform, the two standing with clasped hands before the conference. Dr. Young in responding said that he had until that moment expected to meet this occasion without a tremor of the lip or a wink of an eye, but that the bishop by his gracious words had suddenly disturbed his emotional equilibrium, and continued:

"When a man has preached just forty-five years, and then asks for a place on the retired list, with not very many signs of the wear and tear of the passing years, he ought to meet the hour with composure and self-poise. In a time like this I am looking backward, recalling some of the forces that have helped me to do my work—such as the training and uplifting grace that was ministered to me in my childhood home; the opportunity that came in my teens, when I heard the roll of the drums and the blast of the bugle summoning the defenders of the Union to their place in line of battle; the advantages which came to me in Dickinson Seminary and Dickinson College; the purpose which I formed at the opening of my ministry to study and know the Scripture so as to be able to teach and apply it in my work, and my lifelong effort to put into every pulpit message an evangelist spirit, an appeal to the heart and conscience. These forces have been uppermost in my ministerial life. Dr. Young said in closing his address, which was received with tears and applause—I am glad under these circumstances that I belong to the great world-wide brotherhood of the Methodist ministry."

When Dr. Young sat down a minister rose and asked that all old soldiers of the Union in the conference should be summoned to the front to greet the man who had just spoken to them. At once the crowded congregation rose en masse, and sang, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," while a score of ministers wearing the "bronze button" hurried forward and filled the space in front of the pulpit and shook hands with Dr. Young, while all over the house there were waving handkerchiefs, tearful eyes, shouts and songs. When things had quieted down the bishop said to those near him: "It is worth while to be alive to see a sight like this. A good name still beats great riches." Then the vote was taken which placed Dr. Young on the honorable list of ministers who are retired from the active pastorate."

Major Alexander McDowell.

Major Alexander McDowell, of Sharon, Mercer county, is a member of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg commission and is known all over the county as a former chief clerk of the National House of Representatives. Major McDowell enjoys the reputation of being one of the best story-tellers in the country, and his office at the Capitol in Washington was frequently the scene of gatherings of members of Congress from many States who listened to the Major's original stories and voted him the Prince of Recounters. At one time in his political career Major McDowell was candidate for the nomination for Congressman-at-large in this State, but he had not secured the endorsement of M. S. Quay and his case was regarded as hopeless. But his friends were not going to give up without a struggle and at the State Convention they decided to have his name placed before the gathering by Judge Miller, of Mercer, one of the cleverest orators in the State. And the speech Judge Miller made came very near stampeding that convention for the Major. A number of men had been named for Congressman-at-large and the nomination was regarded as all set up for two certain candidates. Judge Miller, diminutive in size but forceful as a talker, came from the rear of the stage and advancing to the front, held up his hand for silence, for the Major's friends had already begun to cheer. When silence came Judge Miller, in a voice earnest and emotional and clear as a bell, said:

"Gentlemen of this convention, the man I propose to name here didn't do a musket and fight. That was a thing during the Civil War but careenough. In an instant the convention was on its feet, cheering like mad and it took all of the heaviest efforts of Quay's friends to carry out the program to defeat McDowell. It was the most remarkable captandium speech ever heard in a political convention. It was not long afterwards until Major McDowell was made Chief Clerk in Congress, so that he didn't miss anything by losing the nomination for Congressman-at-large."

China's Declaration of Independence

The new Republic of China selected April for the time for an address to the world in the form of a Declaration of Independence. The text of the address is as follows:

"On this eighth day of the fourth month, in the second year of the Republic of China, the date fixed for the first opening of our permanent national assembly, the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives having met in these halls to celebrate the event, now make this Declaration of their sentiments:

"The will of Heaven is manifested through the will of the people. The people in hundreds of millions of the globe

Active at Seventy
Many people at seventy attribute their good health to SCOTT'S EMULSION because its concentrated nourishment creates permanent body-power, and because it is devoid of drugs or stimulants.
Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 13-22

possess the authority of the state is not proclaimed now for the first time. The monarchy, so long corrupt, proved unworthy of the grave responsibilities entrusted to it by the will of the people, but with the introduction of popular government the representatives of the people must share the likes and dislikes of the people. They are to give expression to the desires and voice the will of the people; they hold the reins in behalf of the nation to govern with severity or leniency, with parsimony or extravagance; they become the pivot upon which the prosperity of the state is made to turn. For the success or failure, safety or danger, adversity or good fortune, theirs is the merit or the blame.

"Can we be otherwise than anxious Yet through great tribulation the spring comes to prosperity, and our very bad management and anxieties are a means of happiness. Now, therefore, we unite to form this assembly and presume to publish our aspirations. May ours be a just government. May our five races lay aside their prejudices. May no duty of government be unfulfilled and no hidden wound go undressed, and may the new life of the old nation be lasting and unending. Who of us can dare to be neglectful of his duties?"

A Bad Year for Insect Pests.

Professor H. A. Surface, Pennsylvania State Zoologist, Harrisburg, declares that this will be an unusually bad year for insect pests of many kinds. He bases his statement not upon any long range predictions, nor upon goosebone science, nor water witch indications, but a personal knowledge of the conditions as they now exist in different parts of the Keystone State.

For example, he says that apple trees will be unusually infested with the apple aphid which causes the leaves to curl. Thousands of persons will be asking how to prevent damage by this pest. The plant louse will be in unusual numbers in the curled leaves of the trees. This is shown by the fact that the bursting buds of the apple are now covered with little green lice to such an extent in some cases, that they look as though they were covered with green moss. The weather was not severe enough to kill the eggs of the plant lice on the twigs where they passed the winter, and they were not killed by the frosts shortly after hatching, as is often the case.

Spraying with whale oil soap solution or tobacco decoction, is now the best means of destroying them, although those persons who followed the direction of Doctor Surface, and sprayed their trees with lime-sulfur solution just as the buds were bursting, cleaned up these pests.

Canker worms will be unusually bad west of the central part of Pennsylvania. From Jefferson County and adjoining districts have come specimens and reports indicating that these pests commonly known as Measuring worms or Span worms will be unusually abundant this spring, and will strip the trees bare. They should have been kept down by banding the trees, so that the wingless females could not climb them to lay their eggs on the twigs, but as this was not done the next step is to prepare to fight them by spraying with an arsenical spray just as soon as the young hatch and commence to feed. All who spray with one-half pound of Paris green, or two pounds of arsenate of lead, in fifty gallons of water, while the young span worms are commencing to feed, will destroy them promptly. The older they become the more difficult it will be to kill them.

Whitegrubs and June bugs or May beetles will be unusually abundant. From Butler County, clear across the State, into Monroe County and Northumberland County, this will be a year famous for the crowding of the big brown June bugs or May beetles as they fly through the air at night. Their natural enemies such as skunks, moles and certain birds have not been preserved, and an outbreak is now certain. However, certain ingenious diseases and parasitic insects are already at work, and it is not expected that they will reappear in such tremendous numbers after next year, if then.

Leaf worms will be very abundant, and must be destroyed very promptly by the use of the poison bran mash as published originally in the Bulletins of the Division of Zoology at Harrisburg, relating to the results of the experiments of Professor Surface.

The Peach tree-borer will be worse this year than before during many years. It should be removed at once from the base of the tree where it is working, and the tree washed once per month with a strong solution of lime and sulfur boiled together, to each gallon of which has been added one-half ounce of arsenate of lead.

LEGISLATION AT HARRISBURG

DEMOCRATS FOLLOW A COURSE TRUE TO PARTY PLEDGES.

The Democratic Point of View on Some Important Pieces of Legislation.

A reactionary Senate may stifle much of the progressive legislation passing the House, and the indications are that it will. A good many Senators of all political parties will have to answer to their constituents for violations of platform pledges. Thus far, however, the House has shown itself responsive to the will of the people. To be sure there are reactionaries in the House as well as in the Senate—plenty of them—some of whom wear the livery of Progressivism to better serve the cause of its enemies. But the members of the House are closer to the people than the Senators, their terms are shorter, and if they wish to come back—and most of them do—they realize the necessity of a clean record.

The Democratic Representatives, as a whole, have given a good account of themselves. They have had able and conscientious leadership and the hearty co-operation of the State Organization in the work before them. It may be said without fear of contradiction that the course of the Democratic minority in the House has won the admiration and wholesome respect of the other parties. The Democratic leaders have ever been willing to co-operate with progressives of other parties in the promotion of good legislation, and they have been equally alert to detect, point out and prevent the "putting across" of measures inimical to the public welfare. Of course there are a few "black sheep" in the Democratic flock. Candor will not permit the assertion that every Democrat in the House has been true to his party pledges and the interests of his constituents. But the pledge breakers may be safely left to the hands of the folks back home without further comment.

Nearly all of the progressive legislation introduced in the House has been sponsored by a Democrat or has been incorporated in its Democratic amendments to strengthen its purpose. Every measure involving the expenditure of State funds has been most rigorously dissected by Democrats to reveal "jokers" and eliminate extravagance, with the result that the creation of many useless offices for the sole purpose of strengthening the Administration political machine has been prevented and a vast sum of money saved the State. The activities of the Democratic floor leader, E. Lowry Humes, in thus preventing well planned raids on the treasury have caused his political opponents to dub him the "watch dog of the treasury."

That watch dog is needed is shown by the apparent inability of the Appropriation Committee to cope with the problem of adjusting the estimated State revenue to conform with proposed expenditures. The estimated revenues of the State for the next two years are approximately $55,000,000, but appropriation measures calling for more than $100,000,000 are before the committee. The charity appropriation club, it is understood, will be wielded more vigorously than ever before in the entire scandalous history of such political methods in order to drive members into line for measures and appropriations repugnant to independent of all parties. Were the Humes Bill, requiring appropriations for State hospitals to be based on the number of free patients treated, to become a law the appropriation committee would be deprived of its club and the scandal of using the public charities as an instrument for securing the passage of undesirable legislation would be ended for all times. The committee on appropriations has taken excellent care, however, not to report out the Humes Bill.

While a proper regard for economy in public expenditures would make the $55,000,000 of estimated available revenue ample for the requirements of the State Government during the ensuing two years, the revenue can be largely increased by the enactment into law of the Benson Tax Board Bill, one of the important Democratic measures on the House calendar. A committee more friendly to the corporations than to the people tried to kill the Benson Bill with a negative recommendation, but the effort failed.

Representative Benson of McKean county, sponsor of the measure, moved that the bill be placed on the calendar despite the negative report of the committee, which was done with only a few scattering votes in opposition.

Mr. Benson, in speaking for his measure, pointed out three salient facts: that a fair adjustment of the revenue for the State and all its municipal divisions without compelling any of them to borrow money to carry on their business and pay for necessary public improvements; that the personal and real property of corporations in the State which is valued by the State authorities at more than $9,000,000,000 is today paying only one-third as much in State and local taxes as are the individual owners of real and personal property valued at only one-half as much; that the present system of taxation is crippling the schools of the State, which now rank only twenty-third in efficiency and twenty-sixth in per capita expenditure per pupil. Mr. Benson declared that if one-half the attention were given to this taxation problem as is devoted to the proposal to bond the State for $10,000,000 to build good roads, the people of the State would not find it necessary to incur a huge debt, nor would the citizens of Philadelphia find themselves so cramped for funds that they are actually estopped from undertaking absolutely necessary public improvements.

The House has passed the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution, so that the State may float a $50,000,000 bond issue for the building of roads, if the people approve the proposition at the polls.

On the broad ground that the people should be given the opportunity of deciding for themselves such momentous questions, and in harmony with the Democratic demand for the initiative and referendum, the Democrats of the House gave almost unanimous support to the proposition. The Democratic standpoint was made clear in the reasons filed by Representative Humes for his affirmative vote, as follows:

"In voting are on this bill known as the $50,000,000 bond issue amendment to the State Constitution, I wish it understood that I am not giving my approval to the policy for the State's loading itself in this or any other sum for the purpose of the construction of roads. I believe, however, that this is a question in which the people of the State at large are sufficiently interested, that the question should be submitted to them for a referendum vote, and the only way that the people can be permitted to legislate on this for themselves is by the enactment of this bill by the Legislature, so that it may be submitted to a popular vote.

"I do not believe that this bond issue should be authorized, if at all, unless it is accompanied by legislation that will secure an equitable distribution of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds to each county of the State. I am also persuaded that a fair and just equalization of the tax burden in the State would secure a sufficient increase in the State's revenues to permit the State to expend each year in addition to the amount which present revenues permit of, as large an amount as the State Highway Department can properly and economically expend.

"It is bad public policy for a Commonwealth as rich as Pennsylvania to incur indebtedness for this purpose, as it is the experience of every State and municipality, that the life of a permanently improved highway is not to exceed thirty years. The bonds, if issued, would be for a period of from thirty to fifty years, and the roads for which the money was expended would be worn out before the indebtedness was paid. If these bonds are issued for 20 years at 4 per cent. interest the State would, at the maturity of the bonds, have paid $110,000,000 for $50,000,000 worth of roads.

"If they were issued for 50 years, the State would have paid $150,000,000 at the maturity of the bonds for $50,000,000 worth of roads. With these bonds issued the State would be compelled each year to appropriate and set apart for interest and sinking fund, between three and four millions of dollars. This amount, added to such annual appropriation as the State can from time to time afford to make, would create as large annual appropriations for good roads as could be judiciously expended by the Highway Department.

"I therefore wish to have it understood that my vote on this bill is not an expression of approval of a bond issue, but merely a reiteration of my belief in the referendum on all such important questions as this one."

The Democratic principle of the initiative and referendum is embodied in a constitutional amendment proposed by Representative Benson of McKean county. The recall of officials who betray the public interests is also provided for. The measure is sweeping but its provisions properly safeguarded against the use of the recall for trivial reasons or petty spite.

Initiative and referendum methods of legislation for second and third class cities are provided for in a bill, introduced by Mr. Humes and passed by the House last week. Similar provisions applying to boroughs are embraced in a bill by Mr. Humes on this week's calendar.

Government Distribution of Seeds.

Seeds occupy the thought and attention of many congressmen in the spring of the year and Congressman Brodbeck gave his attention as far as he was able, new congressmen not being provided for as they usually take their seats in December. Through the extra session and congressmen whose terms had expired Mr. Brodbeck obtained a quantity for distribution and a supply sent to the COMPTON has been distributed to citizens who desired them. Many who called expressed themselves most favorably about the seeds distributed by the government, giving a vigorous foreign seed for the soil instead of the repetition of seeds grown in the same soil.

The amount provided for seeds this year was $296,000, of which $257,000 was strictly for congressional distribution, exclusive of the distribution cost to the postoffice department. The secretary of agriculture is allowed to purchase the seeds wherever he pleases and of whatever kinds he chooses, except that he is required to provide seeds that will be adapted to the district into which they will be sent. He may contract for the seeds for from one to five years, at his discretion.

At the option of the congressman the seeds will be mailed by the bureau of plant industry upon receipt of addressed, franked labels to be pasted on the envelopes. Each congressman is allotted 20,000 packages of vegetable seeds and 2000 packages of flower seeds, making a total of 10,200,000 packages of flower seeds for the 435 representatives and 96 senators.

Constituents of congressmen from rural districts prefer the vegetable seeds, while flower seeds are more in demand in cities, so the city and country congressmen exchange part of their allotments to accommodate their wants. Most of the congressmen take advantage of the privilege of having the mailing and packing work done by the bureau of plant industry, and keep the work out of their offices, except for addressing franks, but many have learned from experience that their constituents are not as carefully attended to as if the job were given personal supervision, and so they have the seeds delivered at their offices, where the secretaries and clerks busy themselves addressing, sealing and distributing the seeds into mail sacks.

Under the other system occasionally a constituent fails to get his seeds, then blames his congressman, even though the labels may have been faithfully prepared and sent to the bureau for mailing.

Offices of senators and representatives who take this precaution now present the appearance of mailing rooms in the postoffices, with mail bags stacked up until the whole affair is ready for mailing, then the postoffice clerks must take them away.

High Cost of Living.

(By Edmund Vance Cooke.)

There are too many actors to bore us
And stars who are hardly a shine;
There are too many girls in the chorus
Subsisting on lobsters and wine,
There are too many catered and wait-ered,
Who call for the dazy-and-dry,
Too few who are sowing and hillbug
and hoeing,
So living—well, living is high.

There are too many thrummers and strummers
Annoying the keys and the strings;
There are too many chauffeurs and loafers
Who are riding in automo-things,
There are too many schemers and dreamers
And only a few who produce,
And many investing in golden-egg nesting
And few who are raising the goose.

There are too many lawyers
Who work the south side of their faces,
There are too many tourists of juror-
ists
Whose suits are concealed in their cases
There are too many lawyers and jawyers
Who demand, but cannot supply,
And they serve a subpoena upon a
Martini
And wonder that living is high.

Too many are looking for cooking,
Too few are encouraging spuds;
Too many find sinning is simpler than spinning
Too dress in delectable duds,
There is too much of diction and fiction
And not enough actual toil;
There are too many diggers of fictious figures
And not enough diggers of soil.

There are too many rimers and chim-ners
(Like me) doing verified stunts;
There are too many gapers (like you)
of the papers
Who read and forget both at once,
There are too few who skin hard the vineyard,
Too many imbibing its juice,
And the while we inquire: "Why does living grow higher?"
The bulk of us fail to produce.

Does School Work Fatigue Children

If children are tired out at the end of a school day, is it really because they are fatigued by their school work? Or is it because they are bored, confined in badly ventilated rooms, or because they have physical defects, or are not properly cared for at home? Prof. W. H. Heck of the University of Virginia has been conducting experiments, first in New York City and later in Lynchburg, Va., with a view to determining how fatigue influences the work of children in school. A report of the New York experiment has been published as a monograph. The Lynchburg experiment is reported by Prof. Heck in the April number of "The Psychological Clinic." "An important consideration," says Mr. Heck, "is the greater decrease in efficiency shown by the boys than by the girls, this difference ever being noticeable in the greater restlessness of the boys during the tests. Complete tables of the sixteen class averages were made of the results by the boys and the girls, and the general averages, percentages, etc., were calculated. The boys showed an increase in quantity of 0.74 per cent. and a decrease in quality of 4.25 per cent.; the girls showed an increase in quantity of 1.62 per cent. and a decrease in quality of 1.96 per cent. The boys showed an increase in quantity 0.4568 times that by the girls and a decrease in quality 2.168 times that by the girls. The results of the twenty-five minute tests in Lynchburg greatly strengthen the conclusions from the ten minute tests in New York. The decrease in efficiency must have been due in part to unhygienic conditions in school, home, and children; but however much of this decrease we attribute to fatigue, the fatigue is still so slight as to be almost negligible in a hygienic school environment, except in regard to the few easily fatigued individuals."

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Gettysburg People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they so often get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health will be gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease often follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Help the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, which are so strongly recommended right here in this locality.

C. C. Shank, Biglerville, Pa. says: "We have used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family and are well satisfied with the results. A member of the family complained of kidney trouble and got no benefit until she used Doan's Kidney Pills, which she saw recommended in the paper. This remedy strengthened the kidney and caused the pains and aches to disappear."

and had been on the street Thursday morning. He was helped to bed about 9 o'clock in the evening and it was immediately noticed that he was seriously ill and in a moment expired. He was born in this place, in early life following trade of coach maker. Since the war he has followed the occupation of a battlefield guide. He enlisted as a drummer boy in Co. K, First Pennsylvania Regiment, at the beginning of the war and when this regiment was transferred to the 190th Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment in 1864 Mr. Gilbert remained in the service until the end of the war. As a guide he had formed a large acquaintance and he was never happier than when telling a war story or some of his experiences. The funeral was held on Saturday, services being conducted by Rev. L. Dow Ott, interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

JOHN W. HEAGY was found dead in bed at his home on Liberty street on last Wednesday morning. The discovery was made by his wife. He was aged 52 years, 9 months and 27 days. Heart disease is said to have been the cause of death. He had been a sufferer from severe pains and in the early hours of Wednesday morning had arisen and was sitting on a chair when his wife awoke and asked him whether he was sick. He told her he had pain but did not want a doctor, believing it would wear away. He went to bed later and when his wife awoke he was dead. He had been conducting the livery at Hotel Wabash for some time and had many friends. The funeral was held Saturday morning, services by Rev. J. B. Baker, interment in Evergreen Cemetery. He leaves a wife, two sons and a daughter, William D. Heagy, Clarence Heagy of Gettysburg, and Mrs. George McClellan of Fairfield.

Mrs. FANNIE SHEARER BUEHLER, wife of Martin H. Buehler of Roland Park, Baltimore, and daughter of Joseph L. Shearer of Harrisburg, died at the Union Protestant Infirmary, Baltimore, last Wednesday after a year's illness. Mr. Buehler graduated from Gettysburg College in class of 1892 and is now a trustee of that institution. He has been connected with the Bell Telephone interests for years, first at Harrisburg, then Pittsburg, Philadelphia and now Baltimore. He was married to Miss Shearer eighteen years ago. Funeral services were held on Friday at the Baltimore home and body was taken to Harrisburg where services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Delk, pastor of Broad St. Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, of which Mrs. Buehler was a member. Surviving are her husband, father, a sister and two brothers.

Mrs. LYNN SERFF, widow of the late Jonas Serff, of Paradise Township York Co., died after a protracted illness at the home of her son A. L. Serff in Hanover on Tuesday of last week aged 75 years, 3 months and 14 days. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wertz, late of Berwick township Adams county. Her husband died 20 years ago, to the day of the Mrs. Serff's death, and since that time she lived with her son. She is survived by four sons and one daughter—John Serff, of Sell's Station; Abraham L. Serff, Hanover; Samuel Serff and Mrs. Charles Deardorff, of York. She is also survived by a brother, Samuel A. Wertz, of Hanover, and two sisters, Mrs. Jacob Ditzler, of Abbottstown, and Mrs. John Burgard, of Bignomont, York county. Funeral last Thursday, April 24, services by Rev. A. M. Heilman, of St. Matthew's Lutheran church. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Hanover.

Miss LIZZIE STARNER, of near Barlow died very suddenly on Tuesday evening of last week, aged about 57 years. She made her home at Joseph Mill's residence and Tuesday evening was at the store of John M. Black at Barlow, apparently in good health. Mr. Clayton Coover offered to take her in his buggy to the home of Wm. Rose, where she desired to go. They had gone but a short distance when she complained of being ill. Help was summoned and she had become unconscious and died before the home of her sister-in-law Mrs. John Starnar, nearby was reached. The funeral was held on Thursday with interment in Mt. Joy Church Cemetery.

Mrs. ELIZABETH SHINDLEDECKER died at her home at Charmian on Monday of last week from tuberculosis and dropsy aged 55 years. Funeral was on last Wednesday. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. James Dick, Charmian; Mrs. Lizzie Fox, Foxville; Miss Irene Shindledecker at home; two sisters, Mrs. Alice Brown, Foxville, Eliza Shindledecker, Charmian.

Rev. JACOB H. STRAW, missionary at the Lutheran Mission, Monrovia, Africa, died there on Sunday, April 20, as a cablegram of last week to Dr. J. A. Singmaster, President of the Lutheran Seminary here announced. Rev. Straw graduated from Gettysburg College in class of 1899 and from the Seminary three years later. He married a Miss Cashman of this place and after Rev. and Mrs. Straw reached Africa a very interesting account of their work there was sent to and appeared in the Compiler. The condition of their health compelled them to return to this country, and regaining full health they returned to the mission. He is survived by his wife and daughter. Both were with him in Africa.

JOSEPH W. LOWER who spent early part of his life in Arentsdville, died on April 21 in Altoona, aged 68 years. The funeral was held on last Thursday. He leaves a wife and seven children, one brother and two sisters and has a number of relatives living in this county.

Mrs. CATHERINE THOMAS, widow of John S. A. Thomas, died at the home of her son George D. Thomas, of Cumberland township, along the Chambersburg turnpike, on last Thursday, at the advanced age of 91 years, 1 month and 5 days. She was a daughter of Abram Plank of the same township. The funeral was on Saturday morning, interment at Chambersburg. She is survived by three sons and two daughters, George D. Thomas of route

5, Gettysburg, Abram Thomas of Chambersburg, Andrew Thomas of Altoona, Mrs. Kate Gingrich of Waynesboro, and Miss Sara Thomas, who resides with her sister, also by ten grandchildren and six great grandchildren. One brother and two sisters also survive, Daniel Plank of Steinwehr avenue, and Mrs. Sara Beard of Orrtanna, and another sister living in the west.

Mrs. SOPHIA HARNER, wife of Adolphus Harnar of Emmitsburg, died on April 18 in her 65th year. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willson and in 1872 married Adolphus Harnar of Littlestown. They moved to Emmitsburg where they have since resided. Funeral was held on Monday of last week, services by Rev. J. O. Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite mercy to remove from our midst our sister, Lucretia Johns, and that by her death we have sustained a loss which we deeply feel, it becomes our sad duty to pay this last tribute to her memory; therefore be it Resolved, That while we reverently bow in submission to the Divine Will, we sincerely mourn the loss of our departed sister.

Resolved, That we sympathize with the family of our late sister and commend them to the care of our Heavenly Father.

EAST BERLIN

We only had three snows during the past winter, the first on Dec. 23 of 9 inches, the second and third in February, one of 3 inches and the other of 2 inches, a total of only 14 inches as against 55 inches in the preceding winter. The East Berlin correspondent predicted on Dec. 22 that there would be few snows, that it would be an open winter with few cold snaps and warned the ice men to be on guard to take advantage of any freeze. He also said on March 22 that there would be no warm weather until after April 22.

Your correspondent has been traveling over the roads of York and Adams counties in the past two weeks. I wagoned on some of the same roads sixty years ago from Carlisle to Baltimore.

Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only close the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged. This is the quality of penetrating—probably explains the tremendous success of the well known fluid eczema remedy, oil of wintergreen, thymol, camphor, etc., as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription.

How Paint

The first coat of a good job of paint—Devoe—is $50 (average size, of course). The first coat of a second or third or fourth rate job, $55 to $100

The wear is likewise. The better you paint, of course, the longer it wears. And the more you pay for your job, the shorter it wears!

Devoe is one of a dozen good paints. There are hundreds of bad ones. As likely as not, Devoe is the only good one in this town.

YEAR BOOK of Stark Bro's Nurseries & Orchards Co. MAILED TO YOU FREE

Just say on a Postal Card: "Send me a copy of Stark Year Book for 1913." When writing, also tell us how many trees, shrubs, vines, etc., you will probably plant this season.

This Year Book is more than a mere catalogue of Stark nursery products, it is a practical, easy to understand text book for the guidance of the man who plants trees. Our own experience of nearly 100 years, the reports of experiment stations and the opinions of planters from all sections are condensed and reproduced for the benefit of busy people. An encyclopedia of orchard information, containing full size color illustrations of gloriously tinted fruits and many photographic reproductions in black and white; also information on many subjects in which the orchardist is interested.

Hundreds of varieties of apples, pears, peach, plum, cherry, apricot, quince, grape and all small fruits are described; weaknesses of each variety are pointed out and good points are explained. We feel that planters should know both.

Those interested in growing fruits or flowers or shrubs or shade trees will find this book of inestimable value; totally different from the average nurseryman's publications. It is a book you will keep for reference, and one on which you can depend as being absolutely accurate. Write today for your copy.

A Gift on the Field of Battle

A Story of the Balkan War

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of those bloody battles between the allied Balkan forces and the Turks, near Adrianople, had been fought, and the latter had been defeated, but not without terrible cost to their enemies. From the field arose the mingled cries of Turks and Balkans, the former appealing to Allah to send them succor, the latter to the Christian God.

Two wounded Montenegrin soldiers lay side by side. One of them, whose leg had been shattered by a rifle ball, sat up and, pulling a little flask from his pocket, was about to take the single drink it contained when he saw the other, who seemed to be wounded unto death, looking at it longingly. A struggle arose within the man who possessed it. He would soon likely be carried off the field to recover from his wound, while the other gave evidence of being in a dying condition.

Both men craved the single dram that remained in the flask. To either it was more than untold wealth. But the possessor of the treasure could not withstand the look on the face of the other. Slowly, reluctantly, longingly, he reached out his hand and held it to his companion's lips, who drank it down greedily.

The latter closed his eyes for a few moments, then, seeming to gather strength, there came a regret that he should have been so weak as to accept a gift of what a fellow soldier needed for himself.

"Pardon," he said faintly, "the temptation was too strong for me; I couldn't resist it."

"You needed it far more than I. I will recover without it. It may be the means of saving your life."

"I would that I might live to reward you for your sacrifice, but I cannot; I am dying."

"Cheer up. Exercise your will power. Remember that there are those at home who love you and are looking for your return. This will pull you through."

"There is but one such person in the world—my wife—and she would prefer that I should never return."

"Do you mean it?"

"I do. She loved another. Fate deprived her of him and gave her to me. Our parents arranged a marriage between us. My heart was in it, but not hers. I have hated this man, though I have never seen him. I only know that he exists. But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him."

As he spoke the last words he passed into unconsciousness, while the attention of the other, hearing sounds of an approaching rescue party, was turned in another direction.

Darkness fell upon the battlefield, but only caused the cries of those lying there to sound more melancholy, as the whippoorwill sings saddest when the twilight has passed.

Lights appeared here and there, moving about from place to place as rescue parties relieved the wounded or carried them away to the hospitals. The man with the broken leg, supporting himself by an arm, looked eagerly at the lights, praying that some of them might come his way. A party drew near him and he called to them, but either there were too many such calls for them to heed his or he had not the strength to make them hear. At any rate they passed on, leaving him bleeding in the cold. He sank in a stupor, doubtless from loss of blood, from which he was aroused by a bright light which dazzled his eyes. Behind it was the dark figure of a soldier.

"This one is alive," said the man. "Bring a stretcher."

There was just enough animation in the sufferer to remember the companion to whom he had given his last drink of liquor, and he wondered if he still lived and would be carried off the field or would later be shored with the other dead into a trench. But with bodily weakness both our finer and coarser feelings are benumbed, and he did not even ask the question. He was carried to a hospital—or, rather, a depot for the wounded—where surgeons were at work amid hundreds of poor wretches who were awaiting their turn to be examined. Finally a surgeon approached him, looked at his leg and at once began to amputate it.

Louis Nadler when he left the hospital did so with the help of a pair of crutches. He had made his contribution to the grim god of war in a war and was reserved to die a natural death, for his fighting days were over. He sought his home in a little mountain village of Montenegro, where, with other of war's wrecks, he was received, thankfully that he had returned at all by those who were dear and dear to him. He would sit by the fireplace, telling his friends of the battles in which he had fought and the privations he had endured.

One day a young widow who had lost her husband in the war came from a neighboring village to see Nadler. As she entered the room his eye lighted, and he exclaimed: "Marry!" "Louis."

She approached the maimed man who started to rise from his chair, but she hurried to him and gently prevented him from getting up. Sinking on her knees beside him, she suffered him to draw her closer to him.

"Alas," he said, "you are now free but I am a worthless cripple. You will doubtless marry again, for you are young and comely, and again I shall suffer the pain of seeing you pass to the possession of another."

"I will never forget that upon you again."

"And I will not permit you to sacrifice a lifetime of comfort with husband and children for me. To be near you and not possess you would be a wretched existence for me. No. As soon as my wound permits I shall go away perhaps to America, where they tell me that even such as I may earn enough to prevent his being a burden on any one."

"Louis, my life henceforth is yours. I shall take care of you and if necessary work for you. But that will not be necessary. My husband has left me a competency, enough to live the simple life to which we have been accustomed from our childhood. I have done my duty toward him so long as he lived, and now that he is dead what was his is mine, and I am sure I would not grudge me the comfort of sharing it with you."

Nadler made no reply. He was thinking of the words spoken by the soldier on the field of battle. "But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him." He recalled, too, the look on the man's face when he saw the flask containing that which would quench the horrible thirst and give him a little strength to bear his sufferings. And he rejoiced that he had conquered his own craving and bestowed the boon on his comrade.

Marya came often to see the maimed soldier, and while she rejoiced that she might minister to him he found in the ministrations of one he loved and who loved him a solace for his misfortune. His wound healed slowly and since they were separated in their homes, her attendance upon him was inconvenient and difficult. In order that she might do more for him it was deemed better that they should be married and live under one roof. Some shook their heads that a widow of but a few months should marry, but older persons approved of the plan and the pair were made one.

And now to return to the soldier lying on the battlefield, who had accepted his comrade's last drink. The same rescue party who had succeeded his wounded comrade, thinking him dead, passed on. Another party, accompanied by a medical officer, came and the surgeon, placing his ear over the soldier's heart, found that it still beat. He ordered a restorative and the man removed to a hospital. There the soldier was revived, and when he had come to a condition to be questioned, an officer who was taking the names of the wounded asked his name.

The soldier hesitated. A faraway look was in his eyes, but the officer had no time to heed it.

"Your name?" he repeated impatiently.

"August Hehn."

The officer passed on, not knowing that the patient had not given the name that belonged to him.

Hehn, as he appeared on the hospital list, lay for weeks hovering between life and death. At last, pale and emaciated, he was discharged, not only from the hospital but from the army, and tottered toward his home. On the road he fell in with another discharged soldier limping along with his foot and head bound up, and the two journeyed together.

"I am going home," said the man to Hehn, "to my dear wife. I have done my duty by my country and have earned a reunion with her I love."

"I, too, am going home, to find—expect—my wife with a former lover. I have doubtless been reported among the dead, since I gave a false name at the hospital."

"And what will you do if you find the case as you expect?"

"God knows!" replied Hehn.

When their paths separated the soldier said to Hehn: "Goodbye. I hope that you will find that your wife has loved you and remained true to you."

"Goodbye," was the reply. "I am prepared for the worst."

"Will you kill him?"

"I don't know."

Hehn tottered on, stopping at times by the way to gather a little strength or perhaps because he dreaded to know what he feared. He could not but envy his comrade who had gone on to the woman of whose affections he had no doubt. And so one evening as dusk was falling he approached the village wherein was his home. He waited on the outskirts until the inhabitants were all within doors, then went on and coming to his own house, looked in through a window.

A cheerful fire blazed on the hearth, but there was no one in the room. Presently a woman entered. A cold chill came over the watcher's heart, for there was no sign of mourning in her apparel. She put some logs on the fire, then drew an easy chair up before it. Leaving her apartment, she presently returned, her hand on the arm of a man walking by means of crutches.

The soldier without uttered a stifled cry.

The maimed man was he who had given him his last drink—the drink he was mad for, the drink that saved his life.

Recently a ship arrived at an American port on whose passenger list was the name of August Hehn. In Montenegro lives his wife, who supposes him dead. Neither she nor the man she believes to be her legal husband knows that they owe their happiness to the sacrifice of a little brandy on the field of battle.

In Easy Going Trinidad.

The hotel in Trinidad is the antithesis of the bustle of the port and the delirium of the drive. An old ducky infatuated fivory, "Methusalem," totters out and looks at you. Coolly clad figures in rocking chairs on the porch meditatively absorb their drinks without even doing that. After a time a clerk appears and you sign the register. A while later a black boy comes and lifts your luggage from the motor. After a little longer interval the manager has reached the point of taking you for a long, slow, rambling walk, which leads at length to the room that is reserved.

It is a huge chamber, half as large as a tennis court. A wicker couch, two big cane arm chairs, two tables, a gigantic bed and a chest of drawers constitute the furniture. The doors, the window shades and the walls for two feet down from the ceiling are lattice work, open to all the winds that blow. A door in front opens into the garden facing the savanna. In the courtyard behind tame white algeets step daintily among the palms, and a parrot and toucan screech to each other from adjoining cages. On one side is a row of sheds containing huge bathtubs.—From "The Path of the Conquistadores," by Lincoln Bates, Jr.

Barnum's First Show Venture.

T. T. Barnum launched his career in the show business by exhibiting a remarkable negro woman, believed to be 160 years old and said to have been a nurse to George Washington. An old bill of sale was exhibited, properly dated, concerning Joyce Heth, then aged fifty-four years, and evidence was also furnished that she was nurse to George Washington. Everything seemed so straightforward to the young man that he was eager to become the proprietor of this novel exhibition, which he purchased for $1,000, $500 of which he paid down, selling out his interest in the grocery business, and the other $500 he borrowed. He saw that the thing to do was to make people talk and become curious and excited over rare spectacles. Regardless of expense he advertised in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and the halls were thronged until Joyce Heth died.—National Magazine.

The Best Security.

What security is there best suited to "the average man" possessing (1) safety, (2) stability, (3) profit and (4) convertibility? Traveling in a circle, we come back to our original point of departure—real estate. First mortgage bonds based on the highest class of improved, income producing real estate in a large city with a large margin of safety and an absolute first lien returning 5, 5½ and 6 per cent on the investment are to my mind the ideal investment for "the average man" and indeed for all others. A century or two ago real estate first mortgages were the only safe investment. The first mortgage real estate bond is simply the modern form of the real estate mortgage, equally safe and far more convenient and convertible. If one cannot or does not wish to own real estate he may at least own bonds based on it.—S. W. Straus to Leslie's.

The Savage Club's Founder.

Sir John Hare in a diverting speech at the Savage club told this reminiscence:

Of Andrew Halliday, the founder of this club, perhaps I may be forgiven if I tell you a little anecdote, which may or may not be known to you. Andrew Halliday was an author, not a very distinguished author, but an extremely nice, charming fellow. At dinner one night at the club a stranger was present, and Harry Leigh asked who was the gentleman at the head of the table. "That is Colonel Duff." "Oh!" "Yes, that is Halliday's brother." "I thought his name was Halliday." "He took the name of Halliday as a nom de plume." "Oh! I see—positive Duff, comparative Duffer, superlative Halliday."—London Standard.

A Comb in the Claw.

Many birds possess a useful comb in the claw of the middle toe of the foot. This has been noticed in owls, nightjars, herons, bitterns, cormorants, gannets, etc. It has been explained as a means of holding the prey securely. The comb is sometimes replaced by a curved blade with teeth, which runs along the inner side of the claw. Such a blade is found in razorbills, with ducks, gulls, starlings and many other birds. Where a comb is required the inner edge of this blade becomes divided into teeth. Young nightjars or goatsuckers have only the blade, but old ones have a well developed comb.

The Intelligent Bohemian Life.

Corot, the French landscape painter, was a model of consistent bohemianism of the best kind. When his father said, "You shall have $50 a year, your plate at my table and be a painter or you shall have $4,000 to start with if you will be a shopkeeper," his choice was made at once. He remained always faithful to true bohemian principles, fully understanding the value of leisure.

Doing Him a Favor.

Perturbed Diner—What on earth is the matter with you this evening, waiter? First you give me the fish and now after the fish you give me the soup. Waiter (confidentially)—Well, to tell the truth, sir, it was 'high time you 'ad that fish.—London Sketch.
